3OH!3

"Want"

The sophomore album of the indie duo 3OH!3 (repin' area code 303 in Denver, Colorado), "Want" is an apparent satire of the decadent lives of rappers, with witty lyrics and dance-inducing beats.

The Good: "Don't Trust Me" is in-your-face fun, and "Colorado Sunrise" is sure to pull at your heartstrings as you move to the beat.

The Bad: "Chokechain" is obnoxious and scary. 'Nuff said.

Ben Folds

"Way To Normal"

The Good: Ben has outdone himself again. This album is so upbeat and refreshing. His amazing song writing skills make it hard not to love Track 1 "Hiroshima," a song about him falling on stage. For all you Regina fans out there, there is a special treat. Track 4 "You Don't Know Me" is a duet between Folds and Regina Spektor, two of the greatest artists of our time.

The Bad: This album only has 12 songs, and it always seems to end too soon.

MGMT

"Oracular Spectacular"

The Good: This album is like a mind trip with each song taking you to a different world. Hits like "Time to Pretend" and newest single "Electric Feel" take you into a hippy jungle party in the rain forest feel.

The Bad: If people don't think outside the box to listen to the music then that really stinks when it comes to MGMT.

Lupe Fiasco

"The Cool"

The Good: On the CD, there are a number of guest appearances by Snoop Dogg and The GemStones. "Go Go Gadget Flow" is the greatest song ever.

The Bad: Towards the end the songs can get repetitive.

Women and Wallace is a search for unconditional love

By MELANIE MOORE

Women and Wallace, a play performed on November the 6 and 7, by the Talented Drama III class, was a touching dramatic tale of a boy in search of the love of a mother.

Sophomore Stephen Jackson plays Wallace, a traumatized boy who came home from school one day to find his mother had committed suicide. During the course of his childhood and adolescent years, he finds trouble having any other relationships with any woman except his grandmother. He feels women always leave him.

Stephen Jackson gives an amazing performance that showed his promise and depth. All the actors were terrific and made the play a pleasure to watch.

Junior Angela Schifani gave fantastic performances as Sarah and Lili; two women in Wallace's life who started to like him, but left after Wallace's hard childhood makes him push away from love.

Junior Danielle LaRoach also gave a moving and memorable performance as the suicidal mother of Wallace and as Nina, the love of his life. She added depth and real emotion to her characters and brought them to life and made the audience know just what her characters were feeling.

Senior Annette Luther gave a dynamic performance as Wallace's psychiatrist. Her character was an essential part of the play because she really wanted to help Wallace move past the pain of his mother's suicide and move forward with life.

Even some of the minor roles, such as Senior Crystal Scouten's character Victoria and Junior Brittney McMahon character Wendy, were splendid and helped us get a look at Wallace in a new light.

In the end Wallace finds a girl that loves him and he moves past his pain and Nina decides to stay with him. This happy ending gives a sense of hope and growth from the characters and makes them seem even more believable to the audience.

The entire cast and crew of Women and Wallace deserve a standing ovation for the talent and work that made the play amazing. Director, J Glenn McMahon, had a fabulous vision for the play.
